In addition to the six orders of the Mishnah, the site also includes the full text of the Gemara, Rashi, and Tosafot, a Daf Yomi calendar, and an index of commentators.Additional full-text resources freely available on the Web include:Ã»ÂÃ ÂThe Soncino Babylonian TalmudÃ Âin English translation is available online in its entirely as a PDF and about 63 percent in HTML format.Ã»ÂÃ ÂTheÃ ÂPrimary Textual Witnesses to Tannaitic LiteratureÃ Âis part of a large Bar-Ilan project. This site indexes the commentaries of the aggadic material of the Talmud found in 130 books of the Rishonim and Acharonim. A similar site exists for theÃ ÃTalmud Yerushalmi.In 1991, Bar-Ilan University launched theÃ ÂResponsa ProjectÃ Âin a CD format. New computing tools such as optical character recognition, three-dimensional computer graphics, text encoding, text and data mining, and image recognition enable scholars to look at the Talmud in interdisciplinary and innovative ways, individually and collaboratively. Utilizing face recognition technology, a team of computer scientists at Tel Aviv University in partnership with staff from the Friedberg Genizah Project have developed aÃ Âcomputer-assisted methodÃ Âof automating the system of locating matches from the Cairo Genizah so that they can be properly described and documented.As we look to the future, traditional methods of Talmud study will continue to be enhanced and even challenged by the emerging digital environment.Heidi Lerner is the Hebraica/Judaica cataloguer at Stanford University Libraries. Among its trove of rabbinic texts are the Babylonian and the Jerusalem Talmuds with commentaries, Midrashim, the Zohar, and a collection of more than eightythousand responsa.
